RARE CRUSTACEAN— This is a closeup of one of six rare isopods (bathynomus giganteus) which are thriving in the New York Aquarium since they were discovered in the Gulf of Mexico. The sand-colored crustaceans are related to the crab and the lobster and their existence is said to predate man's. The isopods at the aquarium measure 10-18 inches. The specie had only been seen before in fossils measuring one-half inch, according to aquarium official. (AP Wirephoto)

Heavy Sahara fighting between Algerian and Moroccan troops

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Fighting flared again today between Algerian and Moroccan troops deep in the Sahara, the official Algerian government news agency reported. It said the troops were engaged in violent combat.

The news agency did not specify where the fighting was taking place but said it was "related to the aggression yesterday of the monarchist army" — a reference to Tuesday's clash in the Spanish Sahara between forces of the two northwest African neighbors.

Algeria opposes the planned division of the desert territory between Morocco and Mauritania when Spain formally ends colonial rule on Feb. 28. Egypt, Syria and Iraq launched efforts today to try to head off war between the two countries.

There was no description of the new fighting from either side, and there has been no independent confirmation of the clashes.

In Rabat, Moroccan Foreign Minister Ahmed Laraki called in the ambassadors of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and China — and Arab ambassadors.

Official sources said he expressed Morocco's concern over "Algerian military intervention" in the combat zone and drew their attention to the serious consequences that could result.

Laraki told the ambassadors of Morocco's determination to defend its territorial integrity and sovereignty by all possible means, the sources said.

Official sources in Tunis reported that Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba had joined the Arab efforts to prevent a Saharan war. They said Bourguiba had telephone conversations today with King Hassan II of Morocco and President Houari Boumedienne of Algeria.

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt also telephoned Boumedienne and the king and was "closely following developments with great concern," Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy reported in Cairo.

Syrian President Hafez Assad hurried his army chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Kihmat Chihabi, to Algiers to try to mediate the dispute, the Beirut newspaper As Safir reported.

Chihabi was in Beirut to supervise the cease-fire and disengagement program in the Lebanese civil war. He also represented Syria in the negotiations that produced the 1974 Syrian-Israeli disengagement agreement.

Baghdad Radio reported that Iraqi President Ahmed Hassan el-Bakr was sending Information Minister Tarek Aziz to Algiers and Rabat on a mediation effort.

The battle in the Sahara Tuesday was the first reported between army units of the two countries since they began disputing the future of the desert territory which Spain is handing over to Morocco and Mauritania despite Algeria's objections.

Algeria said the situation had reached "a degree of extreme gravity." The government newspaper El Moudjahid said Moroccan leaders were "the principal pawns and best agents" of American and French imperialism in the Mediterranean region.

The Moroccan government said its forces undertook a "normal police and security operation to dislodge armed bands" near the Amghala oasis, about 175 miles southwest of the Algerian border and near the Mauritanian frontier.

The communique said 12 armed men in Algerian army uniforms were captured but made no mention of casualties. One Moroccan official said "apparently there are many dead."

Algeria's official news agency, Algeria Presse-Service, charged that Moroccan soldiers attacked Algerian troops taking medical supplies to refugees in the border region. Morocco denied that such a convoy was involved.

The Algerian news agency said President Boumedienne conferred by telephone with President Assad and sent an envoy with an urgent message to Libyan President Moammar Khadafi.

King Hassan sent several hundred thousand unarmed Moroccan volunteers on a march into the phosphate-rich Sahara last November and won from Madrid an agreement to divide Spain's last major African holding between neighboring Morocco and Mauritania. The transfer is to be made on Feb. 28, but Moroccan troops and officials have already taken control of the sparsely populated territory.

Algeria, which has about a 10-mile border with the Spanish Sahara, supports the Polisario Liberation Front, a local nationalist movement that wants independence. There have been reports of clashes between Polisario guerrillas and Moroccan and Mauritanian troops, and the Algerian news agency claimed that 78 Moroccans and 219 Mauritians have been killed.

Ethics law unconstitutional here

Six on county board and three city officials not in compliance

By LENNY INGRASSIA

Six members of the Lee County Board have not filed Statements of Economic Interest with the County Clerk's office and the statements of three city officials, including the Mayor, do not conform to state requirements for filing before the April 30, 1975, deadline.

An amendment to the Ethics Act, which would have permitted public officials to file in any 12-month calendar year, died in the Senate after Gov. Daniel Walker recommended changes in the original draft.

However the effectiveness of the act in Lee County is questionable since Chief Circuit Judge James E. Bales declared the law unconstitutional in an order dated July 19, 1974. Based on that order, State's Atty. Patrick E. Ward said today "there are no enforcement procedures in this county if they don't file."

Ward did say he will advise the board members to file.

County Board members who have not filed statements are Merle G. Topper, Rt. 4, and William H. Kant, Rt. 1, Amboy, both District 1; Fred V. Kesselring, Rt. 2, Amboy, and Arthur O. Erickson, Lee, both District 2; and William N. Rogers and Michael Schrauth, both District 3 members from Dixon.

Mayor William Naylor and City Commissioners Thomas Densmore and Jim G. Burke filed petitions but not within the deadline prescribed under the bill. The remaining city commissioners and county board members have petitions on file with the clerk's office for 1975.

County Clerk John Stouffer remains puzzled over requirements of the ethics bill. He said a new law passed Oct. 1 requires the Secretary of State's office to notify public officials 30 to 60 days prior to the deadline date.

"That should clear up a lot of the confusion," Stouffer said today.

Under terms of the new law, clerks of the respective governmental agencies furnish a list of office holders to the Secretary of State and they in turn send warning notification.

In areas outside Lee County many public officials face the possibility of losing their positions for failing to file statements.

The names of Burke, former Mayor Warren Walder and former Commissioner James Dishman appeared on a list of nearly 400 municipal officials across the state who failed to file statements. Their names were submitted to the State Comptroller's office by city auditors. One of their functions is to submit annual audits and to show where there are indications of a possible conflict of interest and whether the ethics forms have been filed, according to Stouffer.

The Ethics Act requires filing of statements by April 30 by public office holders, candidates for election to any office or board, and certain other public employees.

Ward said, since the order of Judge Bales was not appealed, it becomes law.

Judge Bales ruled "the ... ethics act of 1973 is unconstitutional ... it violates the equal-protection clause of the 14th Amendment of the constitution." The order stemmed from the filing of a complaint by Ward on behalf of Stouffer against the State Board of Elections. The board had ordered the county clerk to not place the names of three candidates on the ballot for failing to file ethics statements on time.

The candidates affected by the decision were Sharon Thompson, county treasurer; Sheriff Ray Nehring and Alonzo P. Barnes, unsuccessful candidate for regional superintendent of schools.

Hopes to seat jury for Patty Hearst today

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The judge in Patricia Hearst's trial for bank robbery says he's determined to seat a jury today.

"I expect to conclude the jury selection process by tomorrow," U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter said at the end of Tuesday's opening session, during which 40 prospective jurors were dismissed.

Carter, asking about two dozen general questions, dismissed 36 potential jurors who pleaded hardship at home and four who admitted prejudice or inability to judge the newspaper heiress impartially.

Carter, as proceedings began, described the trial as "the most fully covered case in this country that I know of" and said jurors could expect to be sequestered for at least four to five weeks.

The remaining 74 potential jurors, predominantly white and middle-aged with a handful of blacks and Orientals, were ordered back in court today.

"I intend to draw 36 prospective jurors whom I intend to question individually on a number of subjects," Carter said.

Carter told opposing attorneys that his questioning would be "independent and detailed." Following standard federal procedure, the judge questions prospective jurors.

During the first day of the long-awaited trial, the judge repeated at least a half-dozen times that Miss Hearst is presumed innocent until proven guilty.

Carter's first question to the prospective jurors was whether any was acquainted with the defendant, her family, her close friends or the attorneys for both sides or their families.

After introducing the lawyers, he asked Miss Hearst to stand and face the prospective jurors. She rose quickly, placed her fingertips on the defense table and turned without smiling. She lowered her eyes to the floor briefly and resumed her seat.

The defendant was pale as usual but attentive during her first day on trial.

Reagan starts another New Hampshire swing

By The Associated Press
Ronald Reagan begins his third campaign swing through New Hampshire today, focusing his attention on the state's mid-section, including the capital city of Concord.

The former California governor, who is waging a strong challenge to President Ford in the nation's first primary here Feb. 24, has already spent six days in the state since Jan. 5 and plans to be here another nine days before the election.

Reagan scheduled a news conference, his first in the state, for shortly after his arrival on a chartered flight from North Carolina, where he campaigned on Tuesday.

Primary voting will be "very close" between Reagan and President Ford, but Ford doesn't have to win all the primaries to secure the Republican presidential nomination, outgoing Secretary of Commerce Rogers C.B. Morton said.

Morton, in California for a three-day tour he said was at least partly political, told a Los Angeles news conference on Tuesday that the President is "in much better shape than you'd think he'd be in" to tackle Reagan in the important June 8 California primary.

In Boston, meanwhile, Ford was challenged by Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace to go to the U.S. Supreme Court and request a moratorium on school busing. Wallace was cheered by a crowd of about 500 in South Boston, where schools have been the scene of racial violence since an integration order was issued in September 1974.

The Alabama governor arrived Tuesday afternoon to begin about 10 days of intermittent campaigning for the March 2 presidential primary election in the Bay State.

Campaigning in Florida for the state's March 9 primary, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., told a Miami Beach audience that any country which voted for the recent United Nations resolution identifying Zionism as racism "should be cut off without a dime of U.S. aid."

Democratic presidential candidate Fred Harris, meanwhile, began a three-day campaign swing through his home state of Oklahoma, saying Americans are being overtaxed by their government and overcharged by utility companies.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., submitted on Tuesday his letter of entry for the North Carolina presidential primary.

A Udall spokeswoman said the letter was sent "to keep our options open." She said no decision has been made by the Udall campaign staff on whether to make an active effort to win some of North Carolina's 61 Democratic delegates.

A spokesman for Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said the Indiana senator would not enter the North Carolina primary.

In Washington, five candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination will try to field delegate slates in the District of Columbia primary May 4. However, most of more than 2,000 D.C. Democrats who caucusd Tuesday night remained uncommitted.

Absenteeism drops in Detroit schools

DETROIT (AP) — Absenteeism is down and most of the city's 247,500 public school pupils are going to classes with a court-ordered integration program now fully implemented, school officials say.

Schools were peaceful Tuesday, and observers said there were no antibusing demonstrations.

Officials said absenteeism was down to 16 per cent Tuesday from 32 per cent Monday, when only elementary school was in session. The long-term average absentee rate is 12.5 per cent.

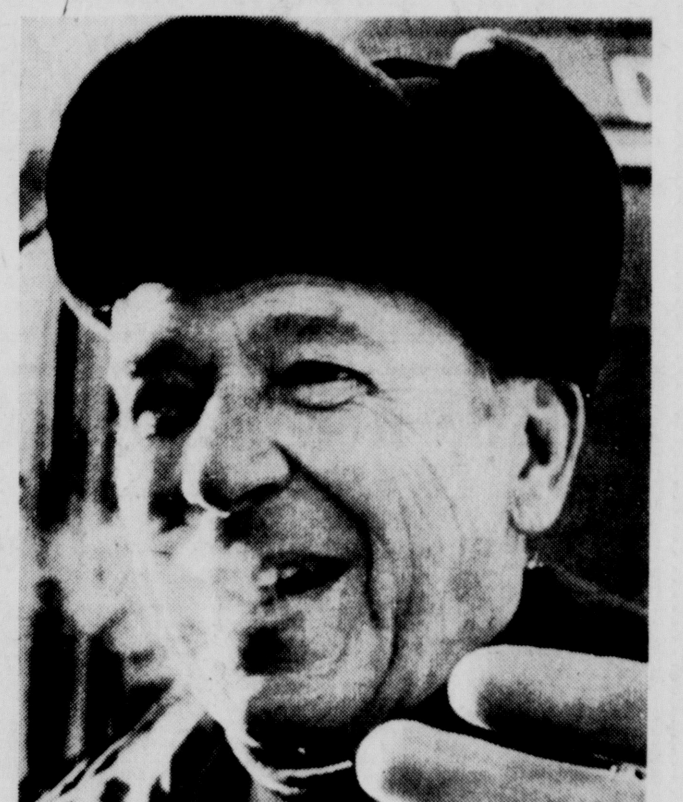

The absentee rate was highest — 25.5 per cent — in Region 7, a largely white area in northeast Detroit where thousands of pupils apparently stayed out in protest with the "yellow flu."

An antibusing group is working on a plan to furnish tutors to those parents who take their children out of public schools.

About 21,800 pupils in kindergarten through eighth grade are scheduled to be bused. Another 31,600 were transferred to new schools, but most of these shifts are due to creation of a middle school system.

School Supt. Arthur Jefferson said Tuesday that he believes one reason the busing plan was implemented peacefully is that Detroit whites are in a minority.

$90-BILLION MISUNDERSTANDING over proposed federal budget changes which dominates news coverage of his campaign apparently isn't affecting Ronald Reagan's glad-handed approach to individual voters. The former California governor is a cheerful street campaigner in wintry New Hampshire.

Soviets beef up air force; eye Manchuria

By HENRY J. TAYLOR
Behind closed State Department doors, Secretary Henry A. Kissinger is hearing that the Soviet air force has opened, on something of a crash basis, two new military pilots' schools at Stavropol and Saratov. It has also reopened the Boras Oglebsk Higher Military Aviation School, which had been closed for years.

Moreover, Mr. Kissinger learns that the Soviet air force is shortening by four or five months its usual four-year pilot course. And Peking is telling Mr. Kissinger that the target of all this Soviet activity is Manchuria.

Manchuria, due north of Korea, prods into the Soviet Union like the rounded head of an immense battering ram. The Soviet operational base for any military attack is Chiobalsan, in Mongolia, only 75 miles from Red China's Manchurian frontier. The Kremlin has put assault-experienced Gen. Valdimir F. Tolubko in command there. He was deputy chief of the Soviet's Strategic Rocket Forces and a former principle military adviser of North Vietnamese Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap who fought so successfully against us in Vietnam.

Mr. Kissinger finds that the Kremlin has given Tolubko a unified command. This is unusual for the U.S.S.R. It consists of three assault groups: the infantry, the armored branch, the air force.

Normally, Russia has about 18 divisions in the area. She now has an estimated 52. Nine are mechanized. And Tolubko, the rocket specialist, has also deployed lethal Soviet missiles.

This puts even short-range Russian missiles within easy striking distance of China's chief nuclear complexes.

As long ago as 1962 Red Chinese Foreign Minister Chen Yi told some French visitors to Peking: "The Chinese people may not have enough trousers, but we will surely have the nuclear bomb." The Soviet sponsored, equipped and manned China's atomic start and much of its development. The U.S.S.R. stopped its support only after the break with Mao Tse-tung. But China's subsequent nuclear results are highly impressive.

Today, there are two nuclear production complexes, a missile-testing site and an outer-space facility. One of the production complexes is an immense gaseous diffusion atom-bomb plant. It covers 14 acres near Lanchow at the Great Bend of the Yellow River. The complex takes hydroelectric power from that river. The H-bomb facility is at Paotow, Suiyan Province, 260 miles west of Peking and due south of the Gobi desert.

Both complexes serve a grim, depopulated missile-testing site at Lop Nor, Sinkiang Province, and an additional outer-space facility at Swangchengtze in the Gobi desert, 400 miles northeast of Peking.

Red China detonated its first atom bomb Oct. 16, 1964, and its first H-bomb Dec. 24, 1967. A kiloton is equivalent to 100 tons of TNT. A megaton equals one million. By Oct. 14, 1970, China successfully tested a three-megaton device. By Feb. 21, 1972, China had completed its 14th test. On June 17, 1974, China exploded a nuclear bomb 40 times heavier than our Hiroshima blast. It was the 16th such explosion—15 in the atmosphere, one underground—with more to come.

China orbited its first earth satellite, orbited from Shwangchengtze, April 24, 1970. It was a 381-pound package. It contained a radio transmitter that broadcast to the Oriental world: "The East is Red," in honor of Chairman Mao.

Since then China has orbited several earth satellites, also from Shwangchengtze, and our Defense Department tells Mr. Kissinger that the second satellite's booster rocket can deliver Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles (ICBMs).

The Red Chinese government divides China into six economic regions. Manchuria leads them all in production of electric power, steel, gold, oil, machine tools, etc., although Manchuria ranks only fifth in area and population (65 million). Economically and militarily, China is literally nothing without Manchuria.

Most certainly the Soviet fears Red China's growing atomic capability. In this situation the weight of evidence reaching Mr. Kissinger is that if anybody is really picking a fight the one who would pick it as a precaution against the future is the U.S.S.R.

Mr. Kissinger feels that the place would be Manchuria, the true point of vast China's vulnerability.

Dixon won the meet last year. This year Sterling and Ottawa are expected to give the Dukes their toughest competition. The district meet will also be held in Sterling Feb. 11 and 12.

Burke trial comments

I would like to express a few lines in respect to the trial that was just held in Lee County and James G. Burke was found not guilty. Why was this man ever indicted with the kind of evidence they presented against him?

Anyone with any knowledge of the whole setup, I am sure can clearly see this was only dirty politics. State's Atty. Ward made his statement, "Go out to get Burke." This was common knowledge before the election. I would like to ask Ward who he thinks he is fooling (nobody but himself). Our attorney general is also a Republican and so are all his men, this is politics.

How many Republican absentee ballots did they investigate? I wonder? None, I suppose also how many have they ever investigated in any other election. I have worked in politics for years and I have always been honest and know the procedure. I have always been a Democrat and I never questioned the opposite party's ballots, they know the proper procedure and so do I. An honest person follows the laws no matter which party he belongs to.

All the Republicans in the Courthouse I consider my friends. I never knew this man Ward. It seems from all we read in the papers all he ever does is plea bargaining. How many drunken driving charges has he plea bargained. They all appear to be reduced to a lesser charge and no trial. I signed a complaint against a woman with the State Police a few months back and she had three violations so the arresting officer charged her with reckless driving. The officer decided the charge I simply told him what she had done. Guess what his assistant plea bargained this also and let her off with improper passing. Does anyone think this is law?

They are so good at publishing how many subpoenas they issued, I believe the figure was 75. Now I would like to see them publish how much this and the trial and indictment cost the taxpayers of Lee County. I believe each subpoena cost something like $8 and were some of them subpoenaed twice? How much did it cost to call the jury in for the indictments and how much did it cost for this trial. I happen to think when a man is found not guilty the taxpayers have to pay all the costs for any trial? Are they going to publish all these figures? I believe the public would be very interested to hear the rest of the story. Why if they had such a good case didn't they call all of those subpoenaed to testify? I believe the taxpayers are entitled to all the information.

What type evidence do they have against the other two people I know these people also and I just don't think they are criminals either.

Now it remains to be seen if all this information will be published? All this has been in the papers numerous times both the Dixon, and the Rockford and also in the Sterling paper some of this has been. On the radio on numerous times also. I believe James Burke's name has been so well-published he could run for some other office and people would vote for an honest man.

He has a family, what do you think this has done to them? Or does Mr. Ward have a conscience?

I am afraid I would not be as humble as this man and not do something about all this adverse publicity.

A taxpayer,
Gladys Giblin

REFLECTIONS—The consumer price of red meat dropped somewhat during 1975 but eating habits showed some change, the overall consumption of red meat dropped from 187.3 pounds per capita to 180.7 pounds and that is the lowest amount eaten per capita since 1967.

Proving that beef is a favorite meat dish for us, consumption of it last year hit 120.1 pounds per person, up from 116.8 pounds in 1974. Little beef, veal, also scored impressive gain in the amount eaten per person in 1975, the increase was from 2.3 pounds to 4.1 pounds and was the highest amount eaten per capita since 1966.

While we were eating more beef, it may be recalled how many times persons complained how the price of pork did not go down when the live market for hogs declined. Well, for that or for some other cause, pork consumption per person dropped 20 per cent last year, and was 54.4 pounds. This amount is the lowest since 1935 and the second lowest record since 1909.

Lamb and mutton eating was not popular last year, either. The amount consumed per capita was 2 pounds, down 12½ per cent from a year earlier.

Leaving red meat, the per capita consumption of eggs averaged 279, down from 287 in 1974 and the lowest number eaten per person since 1930.

The amount of broiler meat consumed in 1975 was virtually the same as a year earlier, down only 20 per cent of one pound to 37.3 pounds per person. Turkey meat eaten during 1975 was 8.5 pounds per person, down from 8.8 pounds in 1974 and the lowest amount consumed since 1971.

Reflecting the drop of use of butter, U.S. stock of that commodity on Nov. 30 was 16 million pounds which is the smallest inventory reported since records began in 1916 and the lowest for any month since 1952.

Overall dairy products started 1975 with a drop of about 3 per cent, but picked up later in the year. Complete reports are not available for the past year but on the basis of total sales January-October projected 1975 sales of milk were 95.3 million pounds which is the highest since 1966.

Milk output in the major 38 nations in 1975 was projected at 385.4 million metric tons which is up 1 per cent over 1974 and 9 per cent above the 1967-71 average.

Russia is the world leader in milk production with 92 million tons. The U.S. output remained about the same as in 1974 with 52.3 million tons.

Closest to Russia and the U.S. in milk production is France with 30.65 million tons.

Wallace hits welfare 'ripoffs'

By REX THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace says the federal government can save billions of dollars by eliminating welfare "ripoffs" and billions more by curtailing foreign aid.

And, he says, unless Congress clamps a ceiling on federal spending in general, the nation's economy itself will do it because "the money won't be there."

But he does not give figures on any of these points, and, indeed, says through an aide that he doesn't have any.

Wallace, campaigning again for the Democratic presidential nomination, argues that the federal government has grown too big and has spawned a bureaucracy which, he says, has grown "stronger than the executive and the Congress itself."

He says some of its functions should be turned back to local authorities, particularly the control of "our democratic institutions such as the schools." Aside from schools, he did not specify which functions he would turn back.

Federal intervention in schools is an old theme with the Alabama governor, who gained prominence battling federal school integration orders with the battle cry "segregation forever." But he has muted his segregationist image.

He criticizes forced busing, but no longer does he advocate school segregation. He says that it is a thing of the past, a way of life in the South that will not return. Wallace solicits the support of black voters.

In his campaign — his fourth for the presidency — he stresses opposition to the intervention of the federal courts in the lifestyle of the people.

When a federal judge recently ordered major reforms in Alabama prisons, the governor charged that "thugs and federal judges are about to take over our society."

On ways to save federal money, Wallace charged in an interview that welfare checks and benefits from other "humanitarian" programs are being paid to hundreds of thousands not entitled to federal aid.

When he was asked for specific figures and detailed proposals, the only response came from Billy Joe Camp, his chief spokesman, who said the figures would be worked out as the campaign progresses.

Wallace says that there should be tighter eligibility requirements and constant monitoring of all relief programs to stop cheating.

"Many of the programs that we have instituted now in this country that were meant to be purely humanitarian have turned out to be ripoffs," he said.

Again, he provided no specifics.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, in a study of the $16-billion aid for dependent children program, estimated that errors cost the government about $1 billion annually. The report said that about half was due to administrative errors by states and counties. It blamed the rest on errors by individuals. HEW officials could provide no specific figures on the number of intentional cheaters in the latter group but said the number was extremely small.

Wallace also advocates a "strong curtailment" in foreign aid, contending that much is wasted on "those who are not friends of the United States."

That assertion also was made without specifics, and the Wallace camp would offer none.

He said that "we do have a responsibility to join in constructive efforts ... to help sustain life and health" in the poorer countries. But he warned that "we cannot do so to the extent of exhausting our resources."

"We have been called on for more than our share, and that in itself is self-destructive."

Foreign military and economic aid totals nearly $8 billion for the current fiscal year. Wallace was not specific about how much of that he would cut.

At home, Wallace said, "The liberals who have been in charge of the government so long cannot cope with unemployment, inflation and recession," because, too often, their only answer is "more big government."

The problems can be solved, he said, only when the nation's productive capacity is "put back to work." One way to increase productivity, he said, is to "take the strain off the middle class in inflation and the tax burden that the federal level is putting on them."

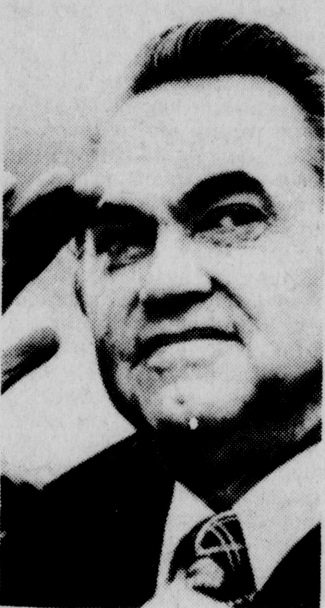

A request to the Wallace campaign for details on how he would accomplish this produced none.

Public works projects to provide jobs should be undertaken only as a last resort, he said, and only "for a short period of time."

Wallace was critical of the nation's foreign policy, which he said should be more than "a one-man show," and apprehensive on the effectiveness of détente with the Soviet Union.

"I believe it's going to be necessary to continue to have dialogue with the Soviet Union and the Red Chinese," he said. "We cannot get to the point where we say we refuse to talk." But, he said, "we should recognize the realities of this situation, the realities of who we're dealing with, those who have never kept any agreement unless it was for their advantage."

"The best way to talk and negotiate and to have a policy of détente that would eventually work is for this nation to regain its superiority in military offensive and defensive capabilities.

"We will never have any generation or generations of peace unless we are the strongest and negotiate from a position of strength."

While Wallace seemed to be suggesting a larger military budget, he gave no figures and made no specific recommendations on weapons systems.

He said the United States should never agree to an arms reduction "unless we can be absolutely sure through adequate inspections that the agreements would not be violated and that the Soviet Union would not use the agreement to take advantage of us, which, in my judgment, it has already done."

The governor said Russia is exploiting détente by increasing its military strength while getting grain shipments and technological assistance from the United States.

Wallace said he would continue to talk with the Soviet Union on arms limitations "because I think it would certainly be healthy for all of us if we would come to some agreement that was a genuine agreement to reduce the arms race."

In the Middle East, he said he is in "complete agreement with the continuous effort on the part of the United States to use its good graces to try to persuade both sides that there should be some give and take."

The governor said the United States should negotiate with the oil-exporting countries and use its "great efficiency in agriculture," not for "extortion purposes" but for bargaining on energy. The United States in 1975 sold about $1.7 billion worth of farm products to the OPEC nations, about 8 per cent of U.S. farm exports.

Wallace said he would emphasize to the OPEC nations that higher oil prices "are not helping the development of the third and fourth worlds, which they themselves are vitally interested in and which they in the past have really been a part of."

Wallace said there is no "short-haul" solution to the energy crisis in the United States, but that much can be accomplished by voluntary conservation. That, he said, "hasn't been emphasized enough."

He said completion of the Alaskan pipeline will give some relief, and he recommended construction of a second pipeline "if the reserves, as I now understand it, would warrant."

According to government estimates, North Slope Alaska oil reserves total about 45 billion barrels. The current pipeline will carry about two million barrels a day. Another, presumably, could double that capacity.

Along with that, Wallace suggested stepped-up offshore drilling on the outer continental shelf.

Estimates of offshore oil reserves vary widely, with some guesses ranging up to 190 billion barrels.

Wallace urged a long-range research program to make maximum use of solar energy.

But "the big answer," he said, is coal. He said the nation has enough coal to meet its energy needs and help make it independent.

If elected president, he said he would stop "the elitist cult in this country" from trying to run the people's lives.

"I am one," he added, "who would never apologize for this nation and try to bare our breast and say we've been bad." And he said, "I would give them hope in that they know that I believe in the work ethic and there's not something for nothing, and the only way that we can get ahead is to work and strive."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Occasionally, you can get away with a little bluff. Today, if you say you hold three aces, you'd better have them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Hunches you get today could be very misleading. Rely on reasoning and logic to keep you out of trouble.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In situations where you share an interest, don't look for a greater return than you're entitled to. It won't happen today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Everyone is entitled to his opinion. Hear others out. You could find a germ of unexpected substance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have a tendency to be a slow starter today. You can overcome your lethargy. Push yourself a bit in the morning.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is not the day to bet on a long shot. Be satisfied with sure things that offer a smaller reward, but a certain return.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Promises to the family today made while you're in an expansive mood will be disappointing when you fail to deliver.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't enlarge on the scope of what you do for another today. They could be resentful if you magnify your contribution.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's going to take discipline, but try to live within your means today. Pleasurable whims could demolish your budget.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Unless you keep things in perspective today, you can waste a lot of time and accomplish very little. Weigh each project for its worth.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're not too sharp today. Read anything important over two or three times, particularly if you have to sign it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your interest in an organization could get out of hand today. Cut financial contributions, offer services instead.

Make the most of your opportunities this coming year. They should be ample, but you won't get a return unless you invest your time and talent wisely.

Pound cake is a favorite all over

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Judging from the many recipes for Pound Cake that appear in "charity" cookbooks compiled by groups all over the country, the dessert must certainly be one of America's favorites. Recently when a new recipe for the cake that deviates from the standard rule came to our attention, we tried it in our test kitchen. It's good enough to pass along to you!

CHOCOLATE COCONUT POUND CAKE
2 1/4 cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vinegar
1/4 cup milk
1 cup butter or margarine
1 1/4 cups sugar
1 1/4 teaspoons vanilla
4 eggs
4-ounce package sweet cooking chocolate, chopped medium-fine
3/4 cup flaked coconut

1/4 cup raisins, chopped fine
Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. Stir vinegar into milk; set aside. Cream butter and sugar with vanilla. Beat in eggs, one at a time, until thoroughly blended. Add flour mixture alternately with milk mixture, beating after each addition just until smooth. Stir in chocolate, coconut and raisins. Pour into a 9-inch angel-cake pan that has been lined on the bottom with wax paper. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean—about 1 hour and 15 minutes. Place cake in pan on a wire rack for 15 minutes, then remove from pan and finish cooling on rack.

Homemakers News

By FRANCES G. REEVERTS
Lee Co. Extension Adviser

Homemakers find the job of menu planning and food purchasing a continuous job. To be a wise shopper, you need to be aware of what are the most plentiful foods in supply and how to make the wisest selection of the food product.

The Agricultural Marketing Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in their January report has the following information.

Beef will continue in plentiful supply with the production rate about five per cent ahead of last year and 10 per cent above the 1973-75 average for the month. Pork is in a lighter supply so that prices on pork will remain higher.

The plentiful supply of broiler-fryer chickens will result in all of those food dishes with chicken or casserole dishes being a wise selection on the family menu.

Fresh apples are in plentiful supply. The record apple crop is forecast to be 13 per cent higher than the 1974 crop. Fresh winter pears are in plentiful supply now. The Anjou (as in banjo) pears are particularly in plentiful supply. You may recognize the Anjou pear as being almost heart shape with a yellow-green skin. Juicy and spicy sweet, Anjou has fine-textured, creamy white flesh. The entire family will enjoy this variety. Boxer (say bosk) has a long tapering neck and a russet-brown skin. Gourmet cooks prefer the tender, spicy sugar-sweet flesh for baking. Comice (say cum-ees) pears have a full, plump shape and a yellow-green skin often with a red blush. The Comice pear has a magnificent flavor and is a famous gift pack fruit. Serve winter pears in lunch boxes and as a snack food.

Fresh citrus fruits and juices are in plentiful supply. Early, mid-season, and Navel orange production is slightly above last season. The grapefruit crop is expected to be record large this year. The Florida frozen concentrated orange juice supply is greater this season. Just when appetites long for a lift with fresh fruit, the grapefruit is coming to market in its prime during January and February. You'll find grapefruit galore in white and pink and red. You'll see them labeled "seedless" or "seeded." Since grapefruit is picked tree ripe, it is ready to eat upon purchase. Look for firm, well-shaped fruits. Thin-skinned fruits have more juice than coarse-skinned ones. If a grapefruit is pointed at the stem end, it is likely to be thick-skinned. Rough, ridged or wrinkled skin can be an indication of thick skin, pulpiness and lack of juice. Skin defects as scale, scars, thorn scratches, or discoloration seldom affect eating quality. Avoid grapefruit with such signs of decay as soft and discolored areas on the peel at the stem end, water soaked areas, loss of bright color, and soft and tender peel that breaks easily with finger pressure. USDA nutritionists recommend 40 milligrams of vitamin C each day for youngsters and about 60 for adults. One orange supplies 75 milligrams and one-half grapefruit, 52 milligrams. Vitamin C is essential for body growth and maintenance. Quantity purchasing of family-size bags of grapefruit or oranges is a key to savings, because these fruits store well in the refrigerator or in a cool, dry, airy area in the kitchen.

Among the grain and legume foods in plentiful supply are rice, dry beans, wheat and corn. A record production of rice is estimated. Dry beans are in a more plentiful supply though the 1975 output is 15 per cent less than last year's record crop. Dry peas are in plentiful supply, despite production 32 per cent under the 1974 crop.

Many Beans Add Variety To Economical Meals
Dry beans, peas and lentils are a good, economical choice for mid-winter meals.

They can be used as an alternate to meat because they contribute protein to the diet. They also provide B vitamins, iron and some calcium. A one cup serving of cooked beans or lentils will qualify for one of the two recommended daily servings of meat or meat-alternates.

Though many consumers are aware that dry beans and other dried legumes are good protein foods, many do not try the wide variety available on the market. Great Northern, Navy (pean) beans, and kidney beans are available in both dry and canned forms.

Garbanzo beans (chick peas), blackeye peas, pinto beans, black beans, various kinds of red and pink beans, lentils and yellow or green split peas are often overlooked but add variety in flavor, color, shape and texture.

They are likely available dry, canned, in dry soup mixes, or in convenience forms such as canned soup. Some of these may be sold only in the foreign food section of the supermarket.

Another choice is the soybean. Though Midwesterners are surrounded by soybean fields, the beans rarely can be purchased for home use except in specialty stores, health food stores, or from a local farmer. Make the effort to add them to your family meals, as they are rich in protein and can be used in a variety of ways.

When cooking any of this wide variety of beans, keep these guidelines in mind:

—All beans except lentils and dry split peas require soaking before cooking. Use the "short" method of soaking — boil the beans for two minutes, then let them soak in the cooking water for one hour before continuing to cook them.

—Add one tablespoon of fat or oil (per cup of beans) to the cooking water to reduce foaming.

—Beans cooked in hard water will require a longer time to soften than beans cooked in soft water. Baking soda can be used to shorten the cooking time. If used, however, add only 1/4 teaspoon per cup of beans. A larger amount will affect flavor and cause loss of B vitamins.

—Just as soda increases the softening of beans, acid ingredients will decrease it. Therefore, add flavorings such as tomatoes, catsup, or vinegar after the beans have become tender.

Distribution aids overall

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Sometimes a weak distribution overall really pays off.

We have given North and South exactly the same cards as they held yesterday but have changed East and West a trifle. Specifically, we have given East the king of spades and West the king of clubs.

East and West can still make four hearts because there are singletons in each of the black suits, but when South gets doubled at four spades he has a real ball.

East takes his ace of hearts, looks over dummy and lays down the ace of diamonds. Diamonds are continued.

South ruffs, enters dummy by ruffing a heart. Takes a trump finesse, picks up the last trump, takes a club finesse and winds up making four spades plus an overtrick.

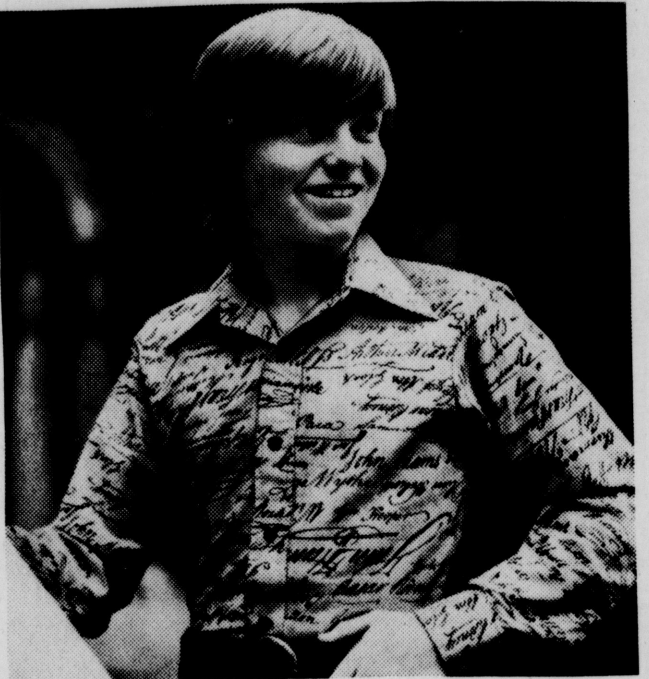

Just think! If South had sat back and passed he would have lost 620 points instead of gaining 790.

Of course, West didn't have to

Album has Bicentennial ideas

By JOANNE SCHREIBER
It's 1976 — our Bicentennial year is here at last.

There's no better way to commemorate our 200th birthday than by creating an heirloom piece of needlework.

How about a handsome cross-stitch picture of The Spirit of 1776? Or Paul Revere in needlepoint? Or our grand old American Eagle in crewel stitchery? Or a Centennial Star quilt?

These are just a few of the many possibilities in the brand-new Bicentennial Issue of the 1976 Needlework Album, available exclusively to readers of this newspaper.

For this all-important issue, there is a special pull-out quilt supplement, containing seven historical quilt patterns, each recording important events which took place 100 years ago.

The designs are: Centennial Star, Yankee's Puzzle, The Lily, Underground Railroad, Union Square, Yankee Pride and Lincoln's Platform. Complete quilting directions are included in the supplement so you can create a beautiful, traditional quilt — yesterday's design in today's fabrics.

Knitters and crochet enthusiasts also will appreciate the many sweaters, accessories and items for the home offered in the new Album. You can crochet a complete bathroom set, make a cozy braided rug or a Colonial Lady toaster cover, or embroider a set of towels

The Album contains complete instructions for a crocheted shawl, a diagonal knit vest, a crocheted Barbie Doll outfit, knit baby slippers, saque and cap and a lovely embroidered sailboat picture.

How do you introduce someone who's had a sex change?

Dear Ann Landers: This is no phony from Yale. I live in Hartford and I don't drive a car. My problem is real and I need an answer.

How to parents introduce a 27-year-old son who has had a sex-change operation? Do we say, "This is our son Bob," or, "This is our daughter Roberta"?

We are trying to be broad-minded about the whole thing and it hasn't been easy. Please give us some assistance. — Struggling Desperately To Bridge The Gap

Dear Friend: Since Bob has gone to considerable lengths to be "Roberta," he surely must be dressing in feminine attire. To introduce him as "Bob" would be ludicrous. It seems to me that you are being extremely cooperative and he (or she) should help you out of the tight spots by introducing himself — or herself.

Dear Ann Landers: Please consult one of your experts and settle a family dispute. You wouldn't believe the fights we've had over this.

What is the approximate cost of running a color TV for 17 straight hours out of every 24? My husband curses a blue streak when he sees the utility bills, but he sits in front of the damned boob tube for hours on end. Thank you very much. — Burning In Birmingham

Dear Burn: I have some bad news for you, dear. According to Commonwealth Edison in Chicago, it costs 80-100 of one cent to run a standard size 200-watt color TV for one hour. This is approximately $5.75 per month if it runs 24 hours a day. Better keep quiet about this or he might take away all your electrical appliances.

Dear Ann Landers: May I borrow from a recent letter in your column directed to "Dear Pet Owner"?

"Dear Parents: I killed my child today. He dashed onto the highway, having climbed a low security barrier, ten feet in front of my car wheels. Being only a child, he didn't know an automobile going 50 miles an hour is unable to stop instantly. Had he cleared the wheels, an oncoming car would surely have hit him. From the time you let that child out of your door unsupervised, this was his inevitable fate.

"Since that day I have felt a sick inside. I love children, too. We have some of our own. But in addition to the sick feeling, there is cold anger — anger at you for allowing your child to run free, especially since you live alongside a very busy and dangerous highway.

"I grieve at the loss of your child, but if you have other children, please keep them behind a fence or watch them. Spare yourself and me the agony of their death."

Thank you, Ann. I can only tell you that the heartache and pain will never leave me. — A Murderer Without Guilt

Dear Friend: I can add nothing to your letter but my thanks for your having written it.

How many of you out there are potential victims of a similar tragedy? Only YOU know the answer.

Pension act causes problem for investors

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The 1974 private pension act makes the future income of workers more secure but it has created a dilemma for some investment advisers, one that some of them feel can be resolved only by the courts.

The confusion centers on the interpretation of prudence, the use of which any fiduciary — that is, a handler of other people's money — must be able to demonstrate. But how do you prove prudence?

You'll find this requirement way back in the common law. For many years it meant simply that the fiduciary must manage other people's affairs in the same way a prudent man would handle his own affairs. It was the golden rule.

Then society became institutionalized. The affairs of trusts and pension funds, which hopefully will go on "forever," must be managed differently than the affairs of individuals. The "prudent expert" became the measure.

But even the experts can't figure out how to interpret the introduction of another factor by the Employees Retirement Income Security Act. Prudence, it maintains, dictates that pension funds also must be adequately diversified.

What does adequate diversification mean? Fiduciaries say they are puzzled.

There is "confusion but not exasperation," said Jerome Valentine, president of the Financial Analysts Research Foundation and vice president of Texas Commerce Bank, Houston. While defending the high standards of ERISA, he still believes "everyone will operate in great doubt."

You may say at this point that you'll just let the experts worry about it. But it concerns you more vitally, because it's your money that's involved and it might be your pension funds that brings the clarifying court case.

As often applied, the prudent man rule means that a fiduciary may show prudence by defending the individual companies in a portfolio as having been selected wisely and responsibly.

Now that diversification is called for, that interpretation might change, but nobody knows in what way. "It's good that the law doesn't tie us down, but bad in that we don't know how the courts will interpret it," said Valentine.

Modern portfolio theory, as practiced by many trust departments, pension funds and other fiduciaries, maintains that risk is a factor of the overall character of a portfolio, not simply a characteristic of each company in the portfolio.

Those are the theories, but how would you as the individual whose money is involved, interpret this situation?

The fiduciary believes that pollution control companies have a good future because there's plenty of business out there and the government is requiring compliance. He decides to buy.

Most of the concerns in this industry are relatively new and small and therefore somewhat risky. But modern portfolio theory suggests you spread the risk by owning more than one, so that a poor decision can be offset.

But what will you say when, after buying three risky concerns, the fiduciary decides to buy a fourth?

Using modern portfolio theory as his defense, he says he's reduced the risk. But you might argue it is more likely that one of four than one of three will go bankrupt.

Valentine feels every fiduciary somehow must defend himself both ways: He must choose each company prudently and he must be able to defend the entire portfolio as an entity. But doesn't that automatically follow? Not necessarily.

Valentine asks how you'd interpret this situation: The fiduciary feels that utilities in a certain growing area are a good buy. Rather than buying just one, he diversifies in order to spread the risk.

The individual companies do well and the entire portfolio does well — until a hurricane hits and impacts the earnings of all.

You might say that diversification meant he should buy more than just utilities, and also in more than one area. But is that what diversification, as applied to ERISA, means? Only the courts can say.

Charges N.Y. cabs in Chicago in license scheme

CHICAGO (AP) — Nearly 100 New York City taxicabs have been brought into Chicago by Yellow Cab Co. in what Consumer Sales Commissioner Jane Byrne believes was an attempt to retain unused cab licenses.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported today that its reporters found 91 New York cabs in a Southwest Side parking lot belonging to the Chicago company and city inspectors confirmed their presence.

The inspectors demanded to see 200 Yellow Cab vehicles to verify their existence. When company President Paul Logue admitted to investigators that the cabs had been stripped down for parts the city on Tuesday immediately suspended the licenses of the 200 nonexistent cabs.

Neither Logue nor the company's chairman, Robert E. Samuels, would comment on the New York cabs being in Chicago or on the suspension of the licenses.

Eric Lumzy (right) is congratulated by Lincoln School Principal Larry Taylor for his honesty after Lumzy found and returned a billfold containing $20. Eric, 915 Sheridan Avenue, is a third-grade student at Lincoln. He found the billfold at the school playground Thursday and turned it in to the principal's office, resisting the temptation to keep the money. Taylor located the billfold's owner and returned it. Sinnissippi admissions increase by 23 per cent Sinnissippi Mental Health Center admitted a record 1,121 new patients to treatment during the first six months of fiscal year 1975-1976 (July-December). This represents a 23 per cent increase in admissions over the comparable period a year ago. The breakdown of admissions by county included Carroll 72, Lee 281, Ogle 277, Whiteside 432 and others 59.

The Board of Directors, in releasing the Semi-Annual Report, announced that an average of 1,199 patients were receiving services each month as compared with the average monthly figure of 894 clients last year. More residents of the four counties were in treatment than at any other point in the history of the Center. Services through the Center's Emergency Program were also up 26 per cent, reflecting a total number of 381 emergency contacts.

Al Graff, executive director, noted that these service increases come at a time when the center has avoided expansion of program and is operating on a relatively fixed budget. Service demands may be the consequence of general growth, greater visibility and accessibility of the center's operation, and economic conditions contributing to additional stress.

During this six-month period the center established two part-time offices in Rochelle and Oregon to provide greater accessibility to services for outlying areas. Projected plans are for the establishment of a similar outpost office in Carroll County in the near future. The board has also proposed changes in the center's fee structure, which will generate additional revenue in order to compensate in part for the heavier service loads.

The center currently provides a 24-hour Emergency Service, diagnostic evaluation, outpatient treatment and rehabilitation services, alcoholism services, and after-care services following hospitalization. In addition, the center provides consultation and education services to community agencies and organizations to encourage collaborative efforts at early detection or prevention of human problems.

Center services are available to all residents of the four counties upon request by calling 284-6611 day or night.

'Funny Girl' chosen as Amboy spring musical

AMBOY — "Funny Girl" has been selected as the annual spring musical production at Amboy High School. Dates for the presentation have been announced for April 2, 3, and 4.

The musical romantically tells the life story of Fanny Brice, star of the Ziegfeld Follies and of the Baby Snooks radio show. Barbara Streisand created the role of Fanny on the stage and later for the screen.

Taking place shortly before and after World War I, the story tells of Fanny's struggle to stardom. Laced with bright songs and humor, the plot also tells of Fanny's inability to cope with life off the stage.

Ray Medford and Jean Stapleton, of "All in the Family" fame, appeared in the Broadway version. The show won awards in both stage and screen versions.

Jules Styne wrote several popular numbers, including "People" and "Don't Rain on My Parade." Ray Stark, who produced the show, is married to the daughter of Fanny Brice.

Auditions for "Funny Girl" are scheduled from 6 to 10 p.m. Feb. 4, in the high school auditorium. Director for the show is Richard Nagel, scenic designer is Carolyn Nelson. Greg Knutson is orchestra consultant. Jan Wyzgowski is accompanist, and Therese Elliott will coach the dancers.

Dixon Police arrested two Dixon men Tuesday in connection with hit-and-run accidents.

William A. Hemminger, 59, 705 Nachusa Ave., was charged with improper backing and leaving the scene of an accident. Howlett says Walker designed budget to drain state funds

By The Associated Press
Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett says Gov. Daniel Walker, his opponent in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, purposely designed a budget to exhaust the state's financial resources.

Howlett did not say why Walker would practice what he called "fiscal brinkmanship." But in prepared remarks for a dinner Tuesday night with the DuPage County Bankers Federation in Itasca, Howlett said Walker's record "has identified him with irresponsible budgeting and the highest spending in Illinois history."

Walker, who campaigned in northwest Chicago Tuesday, told a community organization he opposes antiregulation legislation proposed by Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Illinois. The legislator's bill would set up special mortgage insurance programs for "high risk neighborhoods."

Walker said he has told the Chicago congressman in a letter that his bill is "not the proper approach to encourage conventional mortgage lending in our urban neighborhoods."

Howlett said that as a candidate in 1972, Walker promised to cut $500 million out of state spending. "But he increased state spending more than $400 million the first year he was in office" and by $1.5 billion in his first two years, Howlett said.

Realtors to offer scholarships

Chuck Reuter, president of the Lee County Board of Realtors, has announced the Illinois Real Estate Education Foundation will offer two scholarships, each providing grants of $500 to assist students enrolled in accredited learning institutions in Illinois.

Reuter said in selecting recipients of the scholarships the following will be taken into consideration: An indication of interest in pursuing a career in real estate or an allied field such as brokerage, appraising, property management, investment counseling, syndications, banking, construction, development, law, accounting, assessors, planning.

Other aspects to be taken into consideration will be scholastic achievement and academic grade points; extracurricular activities and past work experiences; economic need and instructor and realtor recommendation.

Applications may be procured from Reuter at 105 W. First St. and must be returned, completed, by May 1.

He called the governor "irresponsible" and "hypocritical" and accused Walker of spending "more time on politics than any governor in my memory."

The 60-year-old Howlett also charged that Walker deputy governor Victor De Grazia, "runs the politics. Walker follows his instructions.... Walker does what he's told."

Howlett added that he would not debate Walker this year, suggesting that to do so would permit Walker to "make a circus" of the campaign.

Howlett also told the newspaper that he wants the regular Democratic organization to back Jimmy Carter or Sargent Shriver in the state's March 16 presidential preference so that Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace does not win the popular ballot contest.

The organization headed by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley is pushing for election of delegates committed to Illinois Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, who is a noncandidate and hasn't entered the statewide preference election.

Burglary charge is dismissed

A charge of burglary against George Friesen was dismissed Tuesday in Lee County Circuit Court when it was learned that he had been sentenced to the Vandalia State Penal Farm by Whiteside County authorities. Friesen, 17, had been charged with several thefts in Whiteside and Lee Counties.

Charges of battery against Robert W. White, 36, Mendota were dismissed on a motion of the state's attorney. White had been arrested on Jan. 19 by Lee County Sheriff's Deputies.

Thompson to speak at Lincoln Day dinner on Feb. 11

James R. Thompson, the former U.S. prosecutor who is a Republican candidate for governor, will be guest speaker at a Lincoln Day dinner to be held in Emerald Hill Feb. 11, at 7:30 p.m.

The dinner is sponsored by the Lee and Whiteside County Central Republican Committees and tickets are $7 each and may be purchased from precinct committeemen or from Herbert Henning, chairman, Lee County Central Republican Committee (288-2141).

This will be the third opportunity for area people to meet Thompson. He was in Lee County for the Republican picnic on Aug. 24 and was speaker at the Dixon Rotary Club on Dec. 15.

On both occasions, Thompson pledged if elected governor he will bring hard work and integrity without compromise to that office and that he would recruit good people who have these same qualities as well as reverence for public service.

The candidate is a Chicagoan who built an enviable reputation as prosecutor of high-placed public officials who betrayed the trust the public invested in them.

Previously he worked in the Chinese New Year

"Gung Hay Fat Choy!" This traditional greeting welcomes the Chinese New Year, which begins on Saturday. The year is 4674, according to the ancient Chinese calendar. This calendar is divided into 12-year cycles. An animal represents each year of the cycle. The animal for the year that begins Saturday is also the national emblem of China. It is the fifth animal in the Chinese calendar cycle and is said to promise wealth and good fortune for Asia. This mythological creature, unfortunately, has a less benevolent reputation in other parts of the world. It has often been used as a symbol of evil in Europe.

DO YOU KNOW — What animal represents the Chinese year 4674?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart composed the "Requiem" in 1791.

Dr. Says:
Leg ulcers are problem of circulation

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB - Is there anything that will heal an open ulcerated varicose sore on the leg? Also what causes this? Is it hereditary?
DEAR READER - The skin breaks down and an ulcer forms because the area is not getting enough oxygen. The dilated varicose vein allows blood to stagnate in the tissues. Since the stagnant venous blood contains only a little oxygen, and swelling interferes with the movement of oxygenated blood into the area, the tissues lack oxygen. We call this "stagnant hypoxia."
The cause of the ulcer then, is the poor venous circulation caused by the dilated varicose veins. The treatment is directed toward prevention of pooling of stagnant venous blood. Such an ulcer would heal if you could stay in bed with the foot up so no blood would pool in the foot, but that is not very practical in most cases. The ulcer would recur when you got up.

Various pressure garments are often useful to help prevent pooling of blood and swelling. In many cases surgery is necessary to remove, or at least improve, the situation with the varicose veins.
There is a familial tendency to have varicose veins. Even so, you can do things that help prevent them. That includes avoiding constricting garments, particularly around the thigh, using support hose if your occupation requires long hours of standing and getting off your feet when you can.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have an inactive thyroid and have taken three grains of thyroid for a number of years. My doctor just finished giving me the thyroid scan and the test shows my thyroid is still inactive and he has increased the thyroid.
I would like to know if there is anything that would make my thyroid active again or do I have to take pills the rest of my life?

I have a weight problem so I have to diet all the time and I am terribly sluggish.
DEAR READER - After a person has been taking thyroid in large amounts for a long time the thyroid often remains relatively inactive. Occasionally by using hormone preparations that activate the thyroid it can be stimulated. The thyroid is normally stimulated to action by a hormone (thyrotropic hormone) from the small pituitary gland under the brain.
Some patients do better on one thyroid preparation than on another. Your doctor may decide in time, depending on your response, to try one of the synthetic hormones.

Usually it is possible to provide enough of the most suitable hormones to totally replace the function of the thyroid gland. When that is achieved any sluggishness and weight problems caused by a low thyroid function can be controlled. Not all sluggishness and weight problems are caused by low thyroid function, though.

Alcohol: The new teen-age turn-on

Parents overlook it as drug

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
and BRIAN SULLIVAN

THIRD IN A SERIES

Late one night, the town's friendly policemen brought the boy, 17, home in their patrol car. He had been wobbling his dangerous way across street intersections while walking home.

He was drunk. "Well! At least he's not on drugs!" his father told the officers by way of apology and gratitude for their solicitude.

There are such instances of parents actually expressing a sense of relief that it was only alcohol affecting a teen-age son or daughter, says Dr. Frank Seixas of the National Council on Alcoholism.

They overlook the fact that alcohol is a drug, one of the oldest in human history, a sometimes relaxing boon that can become as destructive, or more destructive, a poison than other addictive drugs.

Only a few years ago, many parents were badly frightened over the popularity and abuse of mind-affecting or psychotropic drugs, ranging from marijuana to LSD and HEROIN and COCAINE.

Much of their alarm over marijuana was misplaced, in the judgment of some observers, because back in the 1930s, marijuana had been misrepresented as being an instigator to robbery, rape and immorality.

In the 1960s, young people began experimenting with or using marijuana on a fairly regular basis, and most found it to be a mild stimulant with largely pleasant reactions, when used in moderation.

But parents, teachers and some public officials shrilled prophecies of doom from "pot" — which didn't jibe with the users' actual experiences. Parents, not well-informed, became suspect as a source of knowledge. Young people, in the opinion of some observers, felt parents and authorities were lying when they warned against the dangers of heroin. Refusing to accept the cautions against this "hard" drug, many became addicted, and some died.

But soon teen-agers did see what heroin and other potent drugs were doing to their peers, and many decided not to go along. Stringent laws calling for jail terms for possession of heroin were a deterrent, too.

Alcohol can produce a "high," if of a somewhat different sort than marijuana or LSD. Teen-agers witnessed their parents and other adults getting high on alcohol.

Further, in America and other societies, drinking is associated with attaining adulthood, says Dr. Seixas. Many young people now are becoming "adults" earlier. Voting age has been lowered to 18. Sexual activity is more open, if not beginning earlier. Youngsters in their teens enter military service. Girls experience an earlier menarche.

And drinking has become more socially acceptable. Some 95 million Americans use alcohol, by some estimates, with nine million to 10 million becoming alcoholics. Liquor is well advertised, and so is beer.

Drugs such as heroin are not only dangerous, but can be very expensive, giving another reason for teen-agers with limited funds to choose alcohol as their outlet or crutch.

Nowadays, "there is just less hassle around the use of alcoholic beverages" compared with other drugs, says Donald Phelps, director of the division of prevention, Youth Education Branch, of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

Further, he says, people know there is quality control in the production of beer, wine and whiskies — except perhaps for moonshine — whereas drugs bought on the street could be dangerously adulterated. "You know you can get high from the alcoholic drink, but with some other drugs, you don't know. Parents don't tend to get as uptight about it." Next: Peer Pressure Encourages Drinking.

Ashton doubled the Scales Mound total in the second stanza as Caldwell hooped five baskets over a 2-1-2 zone. Marc Heinhorst added six points. Caldwell and Meiners fired in six markers each while Heinhorst added four as the Aces stretched their advantage to 53-44 at the finish of the third period.

"The fourth quarter, we got the shots but they would not go down for us," revealed Fred Harm, Ashton coach. "We were up three points with four minutes to go and went into a stall. It was ineffective, however, as they fouled us and we could not make our free throws.

"Caldwell got a basket to send it into overtime and then hit two baskets in the extra session. Mike Pfeiffer added two free throws on a one-and-one situation, while Heinhorst wrapped it up with a free throw after Caldwell's basket with :30 left gave us the lead."

Concerning violence in high school basketball Fitzhugh asks: 'Where are we headed?'

EDITOR'S NOTE— The following transcript was received in the mail Tuesday. Harry Fitzhugh, executive secretary of the Illinois High School Association, penned the article concerning violence and lack of respect during the current basketball season.

Since 1908 and each year thereafter, about this time, a sudden swelling of enthusiasm for the local high school basketball team occurs throughout Illinois. The first symptoms of "March Madness" begin to appear throughout the state as the annual Illinois High School Association (IHSA) State Basketball tournament draws near. For the month of March, prep basketball will occupy a prominent position in our sports pages. Truly, basketball in Illinois is the proverbial goose that lays the golden egg. However, events of recent weeks have provided ammunition to opponents of our state's interscholastic athletic program. The goose that lays the golden egg may be cooked.

The interscholastic athletic program in Illinois—for boys and girls—provides the opportunity for approximately 250,000 teen-agers to participate as representatives of their local high school in athletic contests against one another. In team sports, these contests are called games—and in most cases opportunities to participate are provided by the taxpayers as part of the entire educational process. They are played for the enjoyment of the students who participate and for students and townspeople who attend the games as spectators. They are not singular battles in an unholly war, as events in recent weeks may seem to indicate.

Reports in the media have indicated that: In Northern Illinois, a coach of a team takes his players off the floor before halftime and refuses to continue the GAME because, the coach said play was getting out of hand. In another GAME, a player on one team steps on the face of an opponent while the opponent was lying on the floor. After a GAME, the coach of the losing team attacks the referees and policemen, who were assigned to maintain crowd control, and is arrested for assault and battery. In Southern Illinois, fans from two schools attending the GAME come out from the stands before its conclusion and become involved in a fracas, forcing the GAME to be called by the referees before its natural conclusion.

In Central Illinois, the father of a player on the losing team enters the referee's dressing room following the GAME and connects with a punch to an official's face. In another GAME, the losing coach, his team trailing by 29 points in the fourth quarter, throws a temper tantrum and refuses to let the GAME continue, forcing the referees to call the contest with time remaining on the scoreboard clock. At still another GAME, a member of the school's frosh-soph team comes out of the stands during the varsity contest and attacks one of the referees. And during halftime of another GAME, a fan from the visiting school performs in front of the stands of the hometown team using obscene language and gestures.

Such incidents of player misconduct, violation of the ethics of competition by coaches and downright ridiculously poor sportsmanship on the part of spectators are not new to the scene. But the frequency and intensity of such immature acts appears to be on the rise. Unless such antics are stopped, unless the persons responsible for the conduct of the games our children play exert the proper influence and control over these activities, unless those who attend these games as spectators remember their clear obligation as guests or hosts, the golden goose is going to be cooked—and by those who are supposed to benefit most from it.

What is the cause for such behavior? Probably, it is a combination of lack of responsibility on the part of those who are in charge of the school and its programs, a lack of respect for authority (that is the referees who are agreed to by both schools prior to playing of the game and who are charged with enforcing the playing rules) on the part of players and/or coaches who are supposed to be learning and teaching it, a lack of good judgment and/or ethics on the part of those who are employed by the schools to officiate the games, and a complete lack of manners and understanding of the rules on the part of those who attend the games.

How can the goose that lays the golden egg be spared from a premature demise?

First, school administrators—and the local school board, too—must demand their coaches (who really are employed as teachers) to teach playing the game by the rules, to respect authority (that the referees represent), and to instill a code of proper conduct in their players.

Second, parents of students who participate in athletics must demand that their sons and daughters compete within the framework of the rules and conduct themselves properly by the family's unwritten code of behavior. Third, the men and women who are hired as officials must consider their responsibility to officiate the games according to the playing rules, and to safeguard the health and welfare of the participants, more important than their desire to officiate the game in such manner as to insure that the home team will hire them again.

Fourth, fans who attend the games (both students and adults) must accept the responsibility that is required of a welcome guest or gracious host. Paying for the ticket of admission does not entitle the bearer to attack the referee, the opposing players or fans who are rooting for the opposition, nor does it automatically make the bearer an expert in the interpretation or application of the playing rules.

During the previous 68 years, our annual State Basketball Tournament has been the showcase of the entire interscholastic athletic program of the 824 member schools in the IHSA. Many dedicated people have devoted their lives to help our sons and daughters grow up in an environment tempered with the philosophy of fair play and good sportsmanship. Many men and women have made outstanding contributions to our state's high school activities program as school administrators, coaches, teachers, officials, players, and devoted fans. The great majority of these people dedicated themselves to the principles of fair play and good sportsmanship.

To allow the goose that lays the golden egg to die of abuse would be tragic. To allow it to be unprotected and hunted from outside and destroyed because of not affording it a proper sanctuary would be cruel. Measures to conserve the goose that lays the golden egg must be taken immediately. Only then can its neck be saved.

Sport Notes

Ashton pulls out

Ashton has decided to pull out of the Upstate Illini basketball conference effective the 1977-78 season. The main reason cited was prohibitive traveling for the fans.

The recent decision by the Board of Education leaves the Aces with three alternatives. According to Fred Harm, Ashton head basketball coach, the Aces may go independent, start a new conference or join an already existing one that would favor community traveling.

The Upstate Illini, which includes Franklin Center, Rockford Lutheran, Orangeville, Pearl City, Leaf River, Durand and Ashton, is being junked by the Aces due to the inability of the community to travel the long distances to the away games. Harm stated that the coaches also did not have the interest in the league any more, again mainly for the traveling problems that arise.

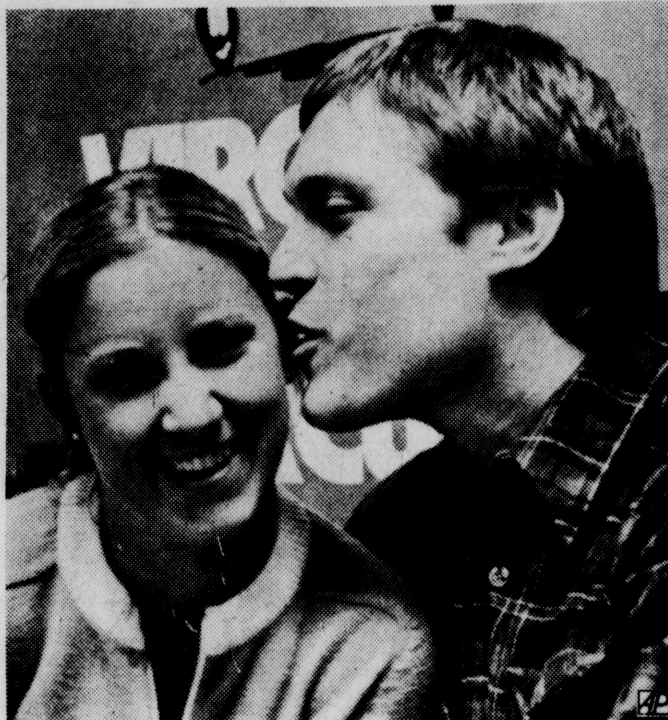

The Aces will finish out this year in the conference and will remain active in the Upstate Illini through the 1976-77 season because of an obligation to the league.

Redmen are eighth

The Sauk Valley Redmen continued their descent in the Region IV Junior College basketball poll released Tuesday. Sauk is now eighth in the voting with its 11-8 ledger.

Mayfair continues in the top spot with a 18-2 record, followed by Kankakee (16-3), DuPage (15-3), Highland (15-2), Logan (13-1), Belleville (13-7), Rock Valley (12-6), Sauk Valley, Illinois Valley (13-5) and Joliet (12-6).

Hollis Vickery of Illinois Valley is the leading scorer with a 28.1 average. Tim Granzow of the Redmen has dropped to 11th place.

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE F-687: Mavis G., aged 24, had moved into a separate bedroom within six months of her wedding day.

"Dr. Crane," she admitted, "I now realized that my great mistake was ignorance of the difference in sexual hungers of a husband in contrast to that of his wife."

"So I was trying to rule the bedroom and ration my husband to my own more limited erotic hunger."

"Now that I have discarded my wrong notions and let him dominate the boudoir, we are ideally happy."

"But I must follow your advice and feign a lot of ardor that I don't always feel, just to make him happy."

"So why did God make women to be so much less ardent than men?"

"For my women friends also report that their husbands are far more passionate than they are. Why?"

Sex Differences

The human male was endowed by the Almighty to be far more erotic than is the female of the species.

That is also true of cows and horses, dogs and other infra-human mammalian species.

Which is why stallions and bulls have harems.

And why men in ancient times also had many wives, such as Jacob and his four mates.

Moreover, it wasn't until recently that physicians really knew the exact day in the menstrual month when a wife could become pregnant. Thus, if a husband were as frigid as his wife regarding marital relations, they could be married for 20 years and never have a baby.

So the Almighty apparently created the human male to have a much-greater erotic appetite than the female, in order to help insure that she'd have babies.

Also, the modern rule that a husband should have but one wife prevented him from Biblical Jacob's harem. If one of Jacob's four wives was disinterested on any given night, Jacob merely went to the next tent where another wife would be more receptive.

Thus, in ancient times, men had harems.

But modern ethical and civil laws limit a husband to but one wife.

So if she wishes to keep him erotically satisfied and insure that he will not stray to pursue some other receptive filly, she must thus function as a one-wife harem.

And this is not difficult, for she can feign enough ardor on those other three nights of the week to keep her husband happy and devoted.

Then she may be personally interested in romancing on the fourth night.

Smart wives soon realize this great difference in the sexual hunger of husbands vs. wives and learn to be consummate boudoir actresses, feigning ardor, as do the "call" girls.

"But, Dr. Crane," some women may protest, "I know wives who are constantly hungry for male lovers, so why do you say women are less passionate than men?"

Those so-called sexy wives (nymphomaniacs) really are NOT erotic but are usually scared females who suffer from an inferiority complex due to inability to have a baby.

Their ardor is thus above the eyes!

"Rare magical film"
"THE HIDING PLACE" is one of those rare magical films that moved me deeply. It is lavishly expensive polished and technically brilliant on every level and a film of precision and beauty.

"Shattering"
"THE HIDING PLACE" is awesome, shattering and eloquent. I think you will find it profoundly disturbing, a harrowing experience, if not one of the most significant movies of the year."
